Working through the GACSB, community service boards in Georgia have developed performance benchmarks to support their mission to provide quality and cost-effective behavioral health services.

Methods

We use questionnaires that were developed as part of the Mental Health Statistics Improvement Program of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration to collect clients' ratings of our mental health and substance abuse services. We use questions taken from the National Core Indicators project for clients of our services for the developmentally disabled to produce a custom questionnaire called the Georgia Developmental Disability Services Survey (GADDSS).

Most states use these survey questions to evaluate the quality of care provided, so we can compare our clients' ratings of our services to those given to service providers in other states.

We used the MHSIP Adult Survey to evaluate our services for adults with mental health or substance use issues. In CY 2015, we collected survey responses from over 7000 clients

We used the Youth Services Survey for Families (YSS-F) to evaluate the mental health and substance use services we provide to children and adolescents. In CY 2015, we collected survey responses from over 1000 families.

We used the Georgia Developmental Disability Services Survey (GADDSS) to evaluate the services we provide to adults with a developmental disability. In CY 2015, we collected survey responses from over 1600 persons receiving services for their developmental disability (or from their family members).

Other performance data were collected using an annual survey administered for the GACSB by Netsmart Benchmarking, who also provided national benchmarks for comparison.

The challenges we face

Limited funds

Georgia ranks 41st in state mental health agency per capita mental health expenditures (FY 2013 data - Kaiser Family Foundation),

Professional staffing shortages

One hundred and thirty-four out of the one hundred and fifty-nine total counties in Georgia contain a designated Mental Health Professional Shortage Area (Health Resources and Services Administration, 1/1/2014)

Lingering stigma

Although general understanding of mental illness, addictive diseases and developmental disability has improved, persons with these disabilities still experience the damaging effects of public ignorance and stigma. These disabilities affect more people than is commonly realized.

Looking Ahead

Extending quality healthcare to all who need it while managing the costs will be a major social and economic challenge not just for mental healthcare, not just for Georgia, but for the nation as a whole. Georgia's community service boards are preparing for the future of healthcare by developing quality and outcome measures to demonstrate the value of our services.

Additional Performance Data

Access to Services

- In 2015 the Georgia Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities provided technical assistance (through National Council Consultants, MTM Services), helping CSBs in Georgia to offer same day access to services for clients seeking help with their mental health and / or substance abuse difficulties.

Service Delivery Costs

- Georgia's CSBs use their money efficiently. In FY 2014, Georgia's CSBs undertook a service costing study with the help of National Council Consultants (MTM Services), which demonstrated that the costs of services provided by CSBs in Georgia were similar to or below costing benchmarks derived from 111 organizations in 6 different states.

Total Numbers of Clients Served in FY 2015

- 156,000 adults with mental illness and / or addictive diseases
- 26,000 children and youth with emotional or behavioral disorders
- 6,300 adults with developmental disabilities
